

2018 was another record year for food distribution for the Foodbank. We distributed over 27 million pounds of food to those in need across our 33-county service area. But even with a record year, we know that people who visit our network of partners don't just come once and have all of their problems solved. Our hungry neighbors are often facing job loss, illness and other setbacks. By meeting their basic need for food, we're providing them with the means to get back on solid footing, be productive and contribute to our community. We are so grateful you have chosen to join us in this important work.

In August 2018, the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced purchases of up to $1.2 billion to help address trade issues impacting US growers and producers. For the Foodbank this meant additional high demand food such as meat, produce and dairy. but this was also met with logistical issues with the significant influx of food. We added additional routes. lengthened work schedules and increased the capacity of our agencies to distribute more nutritious food for families that needed it most. In July of 2018 we also completed the application process and began operation as a USDA inspected facility allowing us to safely repack bulk frozen protein into smaller family sized packages. This enabled the Foodbank to accept and process large product donations while also making them accessible to our partner agencies and clients.

We also made great strides this year connecting hunger and health through our work. One of our largest strategic goals was to increase the amount of fresh produce distributed to our agencies from 4 million to 6 million pounds a year by the end of 2020. In order to do this we have partnered with produce co-ops throughout the Feeding America network that allows us to access produce at a lower price. We also hired a full time nutritionist on staff who began performing a nutritional analysis on the foods in our warehouse and crafted a nutrition policy to help guide our procurement process. By prioritizing health and nutrition in our work, we are able to serve hungry Arkansans the food they need to thrive.

As we look back at our accomplishments, we also look to the future. In 2018 we launched the public phase of our Bridging Hope Capital Campaign to expand our warehouse and add a volunteer processing and packaging center. This new center will help us leverage more food donations and dramatically increase our volunteer production hours with the capacity to engage more than 4,000 volunteers a month. We were also awarded a $500,000 matching grant through the J.E. and L.E. Mabee Foundation and are set to break ground in 2019.

Though this year we distributed a record 22.6 million meals to children, families and seniors facing hunger, the need for more food in our 33-county area continues to grow and you can see from all of our hustle and bustle it's not slowing down anytime soon. Food is a building block for our community. Food allows children to learn and grow up strong. Food is medicine for a healthier life. Food opens doors to a brighter future. Every day through the power of nutritious food, the Arkansas Foodbank creates opportunities across central and southern Arkansas. With a nutritious meal after school. With a bag of fresh produce. With hope for tomorrow.
